Summary: In the tale of The Fall of Goldolin are two of the greatest powers in the world. There is Morgoth of the uttermost evil, ruling over a vast military power from his fortress of Angband, Deeply opposed to Morgoth is Ulmo, second only in might to Manwe, chief of the Valar. Central to this enmity of the gods is the city of Gondolin, beautiful but undiscoverable. Turgon, King of Goldolin is hated and feared above all his enemies by Morgoth, who seeks in vain to discover the marvelously hidden city, while the gods in Valinor in a heated debate largely refuse to intervene in support of Ulmo's desires and designs. After a minutely observed account of the fall of Goldolin, the tale ends with the escape of Turin and Idril, with the child Earendel, looking back from a cleft in the mountains as they flee southward, at the blazing wreckage of their city. They were journeying into a new story, the Tale of Earendel, which Tolkien never wrote, but which is sketched out in this book from other sources.
